STORY OF THE PLAY

Franklin Kenneth Styne, or F.K. as he's called, inherits an old castle from a distant relative. Upon arriving, he finds that he also inherited the Styne Castle staff, consisting of Egor, a hunchback experimenter who converses with a portrait, and Hilda, the no-nonsense housekeeper. An inept local constable and his beautiful niece drop by to welcome the young Styne, and to check him out. F.K., who has a penchant for poetry, soon finds himself entwined in the centuries-old mysteries of Styne Castle!

This show is perfect for Halloween or any time you want to provide a rollicking, rocking show!

Scene 1

(AT RISE: EAGER is pacing back and forth in the great room of the castle. The face in the PORTRAIT on the wall is watching him pace.)

EAGER: Oh, happy day! Happy day!

PORTRAIT: Whatever are you so excited about?

EAGER: He's coming! He's probably going to arrive any minute!

PORTRAIT: Who?

EAGER: The new master, that's who. Lord Styne. The Castle Styne is going to have a new master!

PORTRAIT: (Glumly.) How extraordinary.

EAGER: It really is. There was talk of closing the castle permanently. They couldn't locate an heir.

PORTRAIT: And you would have been out of a job.

EAGER: And you would have been out of a ... whatever.

PORTRAIT: I've been out of a ... hark! I hear a noise!

(EAGER rushes to the door and peeks out.)

EAGER: Here comes a carriage! It's him, I know it's him!

(EAGER runs helter-skelter straightening and moving things all around. The PORTRAIT face watches him disgustedly. Finally there is a KNOCK on the door. Eager stops, and calmly opens the door.)

EAGER: You rang, sir?

F.K.: Well ... actually I knocked.

EAGER: Who may I say is calling?

F.K.: I was told that you would be expecting me. I'm Franklin Kenneth Styne.

EAGER: Lord Styne. Please come in. Yes, we were expecting you. Let me fetch your bags.

F.K.: Thank you. And your name is ...?

EAGER: Egor, at your service.

F.K.: Eager. That's a nice name for a servant.

Doctor Frank'n Styne

-6-

EAGER: I'm EGOR.

F.K.: Yes, Eager, I can see that the name fits.

(EAGER looks perplexed, then goes over and pulls a BELL chord. Almost immediately HILDA appears.)

HILDA: You knocked?

EAGER: Well, actually I rang. Let me introduce you to our new master. Lord Franklin Kenneth Styne. Or would you prefer to be called Doctor Styne?

F.K.: Doctor??

EAGER: You ARE a doctor, aren't you? You HAVE to be a doctor. Otherwise, you would not have fulfilled the will's requirements. It stated quite clearly that the castle could only be passed along to an heir who was a ... DOCTOR.

F.K.: Well, yes, I am a doctor. I was just surprised that you knew. I don't think of myself as a doctor.

EAGER: (Excitedly.) What kind of doctor are you? Brain surgeon, perhaps?

HILDA: (Sarcastically.) THAT would be useful around here.

EAGER: No, no, perhaps you specialize in ... deformities?

F.K.: I'm afraid not. I'm not exactly a doctor like you think

HILDA and EAGER: (Together.) NOT a doctor??

F.K.: Technically I AM a doctor.

(HILDA and EAGER breathe a sign of relief.)

F.K.: That is, I'm not a MEDICAL doctor.

HILDA: (Suspiciously.) Oh?

F.K.: I have a doctorate in literature.

EAGER: Literature?

F.K.: Specializing in poetry, as a matter of fact.

HILDA: (Dreamily.) Poetry!

EAGER: (Disdainfully.) POETRY?

F.K.: Although I have yet to have any of my work actually published, I am working on a volume of poems that I have high hopes ...

EAGER: (Disbelief.) Poetry??

F.K.: So you don't really have to call me "Doctor."
