DEDICATION

To Debby and Joann for always making me laugh.

STORY OF THE PLAY

Two old grumpy Polish ladies, Lottie and Bernice, become trapped in a television studio by a blizzard and end up taking over Western New York's favorite morning show "Buffalo Yak." Well, they do have some help; there are the two constantly bickering janitors, Hal and Sal who agree to handle the editorials. Candy Bickel, a wildly ambitious station intern who sees the blizzard as her break into media stardom, takes over the news desk. Neurotic program director Virgil Mooch tries to help despite the fact that being on-camera makes him throw up. Lloyd Block, the station manager tries to hold everything together, while at the same time drowning his sorrows because of his deteriorating domestic situation. Things, of course get much worse as the audience witnesses the funniest bad TV ever broadcast.

ACT I
Scene 1

(AT RISE: HAL and SAL, two janitors, are sitting at the news desk, having their lunch. There is a push broom and a mop bucket nearby. It is early morning. They eat for awhile. Sal is making yummy sounds.)

HAL: What are you eating?

SAL: Ten-bean salad.

HAL: What?

SAL: Ten-bean salad.

HAL: Ten-bean salad? What are you talking about? There aren't even ten beans. Where do you get off calling it ten-bean salad?

SAL: Aren't ten beans? Where have you been? You've got your kidney bean. Your chili bean. Your pinto bean.

HAL: Pinto bean? There is no such thing as a pinto bean.

SAL: There is too a pinto bean.

HAL: Pinto bean? They're naming beans after cars, now?

SAL: A pinto is also a horse, for your information.

HAL: They're naming beans after horses?

SAL: They could be. Come to think of it, the pinto bean is kind of shaped like a horse.

HAL: A bean shaped like a horse?

SAL: May I finish? You got your kidney bean. Your chili bean. Your pinto bean. Your lima bean.

HAL: You mean Lima bean.

SAL: Lima? It's lima. It's always been lima.

HAL: They come from Lima, Peru. Not lima, Peru. Proper pronunciation is Lima.

SAL: Who's eating a Lima bean? Nobody's eating a Lima bean. It's lima. So, you got your kidney bean, your chili bean, your pinto bean, your lima bean, your green bean, your yellow waxed bean, your garbanzo bean, a.k.a. the chick pea.

HAL: Is it a pea or a bean?

SAL: What does it matter?

HAL: It matters if someone is claiming he's got a ten-bean salad and he's slipping peas in there. That's why it matters.

SAL: Your best authorities on the subject consider it both a pea and a bean. For my purposes I will count it a bean. A garbanzo bean. May I continue? You got your kidney bean, your chili bean, your pinto bean, your lima bean, your green bean, your yellow waxed bean, your garbanzo bean, your lentil bean, your navy bean.

HAL: What the hell is a navy bean?

SAL: It's a bean.

HAL: Prove it.

SAL: Prove it? What do you mean, prove it? (Digs ones out of the container.) Here. That's a navy bean. (HE throws it at HIM.) You got your kidney bean, your chili bean, your pinto bean, your lima bean, your green bean, your yellow waxed bean, your garbanzo bean, your lentil bean, your navy bean and your butter bean. Ten beans.

(VIRGIL, the show director, enters quickly.)

VIRGIL: Oh, this is great! Just great! Mr. Block! Mr. Block!!! (HE is gone.)

SAL: You want to try some?

HAL: No, thank you. I am not a fan of the legume.

SAL: Not a fan of the legume? Legumes are good for you. Are you kidding me? Everyone is trying to eat more legumes. There are tribes in South America that eat only legumes. They live to be 150. They graduate from high school at like 85. (HE puts a spoonful in his mouth.) Pay now or pay later.

HAL: Yeah, I'll be the one paying later.

SAL: Suit yourself.

HAL: You suit yourself. Besides, I don't eat from Tupperware.

SAL: You don't eat from Tupperware? What's that mean?

HAL: I don't eat things that have been stored in Tupperware.

SAL: What's wrong with Tupperware?

HAL: Causes cancer. It's a proven fact.
