SYNOPSIS OF THE PLAY

Maxwell the Magnificent, the famous magician, has just completed a grueling world tour. His entire production company has returned to Max's private island estate to store away props, collect final paychecks and head for home.

It is here, while checking over props, that Max comes to the reluctant realization that his continuous bad luck on the tour was by design. Someone has been trying to ruin his act with sabotage! He contacts his old friend, Inspector Jerry Doody, and hits upon a plan to uncover the guilty party. The entire troupe will be confined to the island and a special command performance featuring highlights of the tour will be presented.

Through Max's illusions and the Inspector's detective work, the culprit is finally revealed among some mystifying magical illusions.

The play is a light whodunit with several major magical illusions and a number of minor magical bits. The work includes easy-to-follow directions for all the magic and allows for the addition or deletion of bits, at the director's discretion.

SYNOPSIS

Act I: Present day, mid morning.

Act II: Later that day.

Act III: The next day, near midnight.

THE SET

The workshop of Maxwell the Magnificent is the converted servants' quarters on the grounds of his private island estate. He is a wealthy, successful magician, who desires privacy. The main room of the workshop is cluttered with devices and gadgets as well as tools and building materials. There are several pieces of furniture about, some mementos, and props and poster advertisements of past performances. Among the devices in the shop are the box for cutting a subject in half; a booth for making one disappear; and a trunk, chains, locks, handcuffs, swords and various other basic ingredients in a magic act. UPS, standing on end, is a coffin-like box with chains and locks around it.

(SEE PRODUCTION notes at end for complete instructions on magic devises.)

ACT I

(AT RISE: The stage LIGHTS are on half. Enter SL CLYDESDALE, the butler, wearing his uniform of long tails and white gloves. He carries a feather duster. He turns up the lights and begins to look about calling, in his British, upper-crust, well-bred manner.)

CLYDE: Sir ... Oh sir ... (HE looks about, checking in the trunk, disappearing booth, boxes, and lastly the "coffin." He rattles the chains, pulls a large key ring from his coat pocket and searches through the hundreds of keys on it. He selects one and opens the padlocks at the top chain and bottom chain, he pulls out six nails, three on each side and removes the cover. Inside is MAX in a strait jacket with tape across his mouth and a blindfold on.) Oh ... there you are. Will you be joining us in the main house for dinner, sir, or shall I instruct Mrs. Gardner to serve you here in your workshop? (MAX mumbles and moans.) Very good, sir. (CLYDE begins to leave. MAX starts moaning and mumbling loudly. He is trying to get Clyde's attention. HE bangs his head against the wood box. Clyde comes back over to him.) Do you require assistance, sir? (More mumbling and head nod "yes.") Very good, sir. (CLYDE removes the blindfold. MAX has a look of fright on his face and shakes his head "no" in anticipation of what's coming. Clyde gives a slight smile.) Now, now, sir ... where is our backbone? Stiff upper lip, what. Ready ... (Ripping off the tape!)

MAX: (In pain.) Nooooo!

CLYDE: That wasn't so bad now, was it?

MAX: I think you enjoyed that.

CLYDE: Hardly, sir.

MAX: I've told you a hundred times not to do that. Undo my hands and I'll take off the tape!

CLYDE: I shall endeavor to remember that, sir ... for our next occasion.

MAX: Clydesdale, would you mind ... (Indicates the strait jacket HE would like help in removing.)
