DEDICATION

For my big brother Tim Swartz who introduced me to DRACULA on the

The Playwright

STORY OF THE PLAY

No modern-day monster can equal the chill factor than that of Dracula and his nosferatu, the undead who must feed on the blood of the living to exist. Their lust, shown only in the darkest hours, haunts even the bravest of us mortal souls.

This adaptation of Bram Stoker's 1897 novel is done with a sure and steady hand by frightmesiter L. Don Swartz. We encounter Dracula's horror from his centuries-old castle in Europe, to the ship he travels on, and finally to his new feeding grounds near an English asylum.

When Dracula causes the death of a young woman named Lucy, her fiancé Holmwood, her friend Mina, Mina's husband Jonathan Harker, a physician Dr. Seward, and others must conquer their fears to become vampire "hunters." In order to free Miss Lucy's soul, they must destroy her body, and more importantly, the Count's as well.

The hunters are lead by Dr. Van Helsing, in a daring character departure portrayed here as a woman. Another departure is a tight, sharp ending focusing on Mina and her role in the vampire's destruction. Rather than a love story which asks us to sympathize with the Count, a 20th-century invention, this version remains true to Stoker's thematic core, the power of good over evil.

ACT I
Prologue

(AT RISE: A bench near the sea. SOUNDS of the sea are heard. MUSIC: "SEASIDE THEME." MARY, a young girl, is reading a newspaper to her blind GRANDMOTHER.)

MARY: "The Crown, in a terse statement, rebuked the folly ..."

GRANDMOTHER: Enough of the politics, let's have some serious journalism. Read from the gossip page.

MARY: Grandmother, it's called the Society Page.

GRANDMOTHER: Same difference. Something juicy, if you please.

MARY: Something juicy ... let's see. It says here that an anonymous source claims that a nobleman from a distant land has purchased Carfax Abbey.

GRANDMOTHER: Well, that's odd. Who would want that ruin? It's not fit for the living.

MARY: According to the article, a solicitor, named Jonathan Harker from the Peter Hawkins Firm, is traveling to Transylvania to finalize the transaction.

GRANDMOTHER: What would anyone possibly want with Carfax Abbey?

MARY: I can't even imagine. The children in town say the place is haunted.

GRANDMOTHER: Haunted? Nonsense. What is the name of our new neighbor?

MARY: It says here ... ah, blah, blah, blah, old family, wealthy ... here it is ... his name is ... Count Dracula.

(A distant SOUND of thunder.)

GRANDMOTHER: (Standing.) Storm's comin'. Take me home, Mary.

MARY: Yes, Grandmother. (SHE takes HER hand.)

GRANDMOTHER: (Looking out to sea, SHE whispers.) Dracula.

(THEY exit. It begins to rain.)

(BLACKOUT.)

Scene 1

(AT RISE: Castle Dracula. May 5th. It is late at night. SOUNDS of the creatures of the night. We hear a carriage approach, stop briefly and leave quickly. JONATHAN HARKER enters, dragging a very heavy trunk, and approaches the massive steps of Castle Dracula. Reaching in his pocket he finds a golden crucifix on a chain. He smiles at it, and swinging his arm; he intends to throw it away. He stops. Opening his fist he looks at the religious trinket. A bat swoops down on him – he swats it away. After a moment of hesitation, he puts it back in his pocket and dragging the trunk up the steps, knocks on the massive door. MUSIC: "DRACULA'S THEME." The door opens and DRACULA appears, holding an ancient lantern. He is an old man dressed from head to foot in black. His face and hands are extremely pale; his fingernails, long and sharp.)

DRACULA: Welcome to my house. Enter freely and of your own will. Come freely. Go safely and leave something of the happiness you bring.

HARKER: Count Dracula?

DRACULA: I am Dracula. I bid you welcome, Mr. Harker, to my house. (HARKER hesitates to step over the threshold.) Come in, the night air has a chill.

(HARKER enters. DRACULA smiles and picks up Harker's trunk with no effort.)

HARKER: Please, Count, allow me, it is very heavy.

DRACULA: Nay, sir, you are my guest. It is late and my people are not available. Let me see to your comfort myself.

(DRACULA leads HIM off. A moment later they appear in the SR tunnel at a well-set table with bright candles.)

DRACULA: I pray you, be seated and sup how you please.

(HARKER sits. DRACULA raises the lid on a chicken dinner.)

HARKER: Thank you.

(DRACULA crosses away from the table and stands in front of the SR tunnel.)
