DEDICATION

To my wife, Mary, for her help, encouragement, and support.

STORY OF THE PLAY

This is the story of a killer, her relationship to the family of the victim and her relationship to her own conscience. The play opens in a courtroom with the murder victim's blind sister, Whitney, giving a family impact statement. Her personal sentence seals the fate of Cheek, the defendant, far worse than any court punishment of "life in prison" could ever do. "I sentence you...to see the image of my sister's face in your hands. I want your hands to be the constant reminder of the horror you saw in her face as you squeezed the life out of her...I want this image in your mind every minute of every day for as long as you live." In prison, Cheek experiences the daily horror that makes it impossible for her to live a "normal" prison life. The image of the murder victim is a constant reminder of the horrible act of pain that she inflicted on the family. The daily reminder makes life impossible. Will a surprise visit change the situation?

The Prisoner's Hands

Sound effects: Prison siren, heavy metal doors opening and closing. Eerie music is used during the hand effects. Live harmonica music is used at the end and beginning of scenes because it helps create a prison atmosphere. The tunes could be original except for the final song "Amazing Grace" by John Newton. "Amazing Grace" is in public domain.

Special Hand Effects: Hand effects include a blue glow that covers the area and a red spotlight on the actor's face. Eerie music plays.

Props: Video camera, microphone with long cord, gavel, handcuffs, briefcase, white cane, sunglasses, folded paper, two clipboards, pencil, name tags, seven code books, seven work assignment forms, necklace pouch, six food trays, dinner and breakfast "food," knit hat, white socks, mop, bucket, napkin and cake, and basketball.

Set piece list: Judge's desk and chair, American and state flags, speaker podium, four chairs, table, mug shot camera on stand, height chart, written jail rules, small table, telephone, written phone limit sign, seven folding chairs, two pillows, blankets, and sheets, two beds, stool, sink and towel, mirror, long table, two stools and bench for four.

Set note: The prison bars are made of ½ inch PVC plastic pipe. The bars making up the DS wall are cut shorter to give the impression of a full wall and the audience an unobstructed view of the scenes in the prison cell.

Costume suggestions are at the end of the play.

Scene 1

(AT RISE: Courtroom for the sentencing for Cheek Reese. Judge's desk and chair CS, American and state flags are behind judge's desk, two chairs and podium SR, defendant's table and two chairs DSL. SPECTATORS are present. Television reporter GRETCHEN HEATH is preparing to do a live report. She adjusts the ear piece and tests the microphone. CAMERAMAN aims camera at her. LIGHTS up.)

HEATH: Test, test, test. Hal, can you hear me? (Pause.)
Good.

CAMERAMAN: We're on in ten... nine... eight... seven... six...
(The rest of the count is done silently with hand gestures until the final "you're on" signal.)

HEATH: (Speaking into a microphone and looking at camera.)
I'm in the courtroom of Judge Lynn Thomas who is about to announce the sentence of convicted murderer Cheek Reese. Three days ago a jury found Ms. Reese guilty of the brutal strangulation murder of Marcy Reagan, a young college student, for five dollars and a Starbucks gift card.

(MRS. REAGAN and WHITNEY REAGAN, who is blind, enter. Whitney wears sunglasses and carries a white cane. They sit SR.)

HEATH: (Cont'd.) The Reagan family has entered the courtroom. Mrs. Reagan's face shows the strain of weeks of listening to the gruesome details of her daughter's horrific death at the hands of what some are calling a heartless beast with no sign of remorse. Even though the verdict is guilty the family shows no signs of relief. Their loss is too great for celebration.

(CHEEK REESE, in handcuffs and escorted by a COURT GUARD, enters SL. Her LAWYER follows. They sit behind a table SL. Court guard stands at attention.)

HEATH: (Cont'd.) The defendant is being lead into the courtroom followed by her lawyer.

(CAMERAMAN turns the camera in the direction of CHEEK.)

HEATH: (Cont'd.) Her facial expression is blank, but her eyes have a dark, defiant stare that chills you to the bone. Judge Lynn Thomas is about to enter the courtroom.

(CAMERAMAN turns the camera back to HEATH.)

HEATH: (Cont'd.) I'll be back immediately after the court has adjourned. Gretchen Heath sending it back to you in the studio.

(HEATH and CAMERAMAN stand off to SR.)

BAILIFF: (OS. voice.) ALL RISE!

(SPECTATORS in the court stand.)

BAILIFF: (Cont'd. OS.) THE HONORABLE JUDGE LYNN THOMAS PRESIDING!

(JUDGE LYNN THOMAS enters and sits at desk CS.)

JUDGE: Court is in session. You may be seated.

(SPECTATORS in the court sit.)

JUDGE: (Cont'd.) The jury has found the defendant, Cheek Reese, guilty of second degree murder in the death of Marcy Reagan. We are here today to issue the sentence. Before the court announces the length of incarceration, the family has requested time to address the defendant. Mrs. Reagan, you may read your statement.
