SYNOPSIS

Clay Davis and Diane Scott have yet to set a date for their wedding, though they've been dating each other for quite some time. The problem is, they never see each other. Clay has been working night and day at WRAP, a radio station he manages and hopes to buy - if he can get the ratings up. Diane works way out of town at an exclusive resort owned by her aunt, Nora Scott. The resort, Four Seasons Lodge, is set on an island famed for its water fowl population.

Sid Templeton, Mrs. Scott's neighbor, has been trying to sell his half of the island to developers. Every deal falls through because the developers only want the whole island and Nora won't give up her home and her business. And what a business! This weekend she is catering to the richest debutante in America, Marla Meecham; Hollywood's greatest former child star, Holly Royce; and current hot rock star, Aleetha Marks.

Along with the already famous are those hoping to become famous, including a budding mystery novelist, Ursula Caan; a future Julia Childs, Mary Louise Crockett; and an ambitious but as yet undiscovered actress, Brooke Brewster, Holly's jealous cousin. Also present at the resort are Madame Lutess, a renowned medium, and a mysterious Countess DuChamp from Paris.

When Marla Meecham suddenly dies after eating several chocolate-covered cherries, everyone assumes she's had a heart attack because she was so grossly overweight. But Clay finds out the candies were poisoned and heads out to the resort to warn Diane and her aunt. A terrible blizzard develops, forcing Clay to stay at the resort. Unfortunately as the police "wrap up" taking the details, the killer burns their bridge behind them and cuts the island off from the mainland. Then he or she has a field day! First Countess DuChamp disappears, and then the maid.

Clay and Diane, working with WRAP, find enough clues to figure out the handyman, Mr. Butterfield, is the killer. During Clay's nightly talk show, which he does from the resort, they capture Butterfield. The incident boosts ratings and bolsters morale at the resort until the next day when Butterfield escapes. With the killer loose the guests are once again terrorized.

Madame Lutess finally calls upon all to attend a seance. During contact with the vanished Countess, Madame learns that Elizabeth, the maid, must be found or she will die. The Countess demands she be brought to the reading room by ten.

Elizabeth does show up, and with everybody trying to fool everyone else, the killer eventually gives himself - or herself away. Every movement is broadcast over WRAP, and the talk show actually saves the day with special sound effects. By the final curtain Clay and Diane manage to unravel the mystery and set the date !

ACT I

TINA: (Brightly.) Has this ever happened to you? You walk into your living room, turn on the light and find mean old Mr. Cockroach sitting in your favorite chair reading the paper? I mean, just try and ask him nicely to leave and what do you get? The rest of his family singing "Home Sweet Home!" Well, listeners out there in radio land, we have the solution for you! "Bug-Off" will kill Mr. Cockroach deader than a doornail, faster than a speeding bullet, and flatter than a pancake. (SHE looks up from her script and holds up an aerosol can.) And speaking of pancakes, "Bug-Off" smells just like cinnamon toast, so you freshen the air while you kill those pesty intruders. And now, back to WRAP's "Night Rap" with Clay Davis.

CLAY: Thanks, Tina and we've got just a few minutes left with Dr. Clyde Bledsoe, a noted criminal scientist from Degorchi Detective College. Dr. Bledsoe is an expert on what makes criminals tick and how to take the tick out of their tock. We've got a caller on the line. You're on the air!

CALLER: Hello? Dr. Bloodsore? Can you tell me if there's such a thing as a criminal type?

BLEDSOE: (Impressed with HIMSELF.) Indeed there is.

CLAY: Is there some kind of description you can give our caller, doctor?

BLEDSOE: Do you mean five foot two, eyes of blue?

CALLER: (Excitedly.) I KNEW it! That's my brother-in-law, Ernie! How can I turn the bum in?

CLAY: (Tiredly.) I don't think Dr. Bledsoe meant exactly that.

Tune in to Murder

BLEDSOE: By no means. There IS no physical description of the criminal type. Ruthless people can be short, tall, fat, thin, blonde, brunette. They look just like you or me!

CALLER: Speak for yourself, brains! So what makes this criminal type?

BLEDSOE: (With mounting enthusiasm.) It's inside. The true criminal has little if any compassion. They're self-centered, spoiled, and at any moment when things don't go their way, they explode, lashing out violently against society!

CLAY: Are we talking murder here?

BLEDSOE: (Passionately twisting a cord.) There's a killing every other minute in this country and we're civilized! Who knows the powers of human passion!

CALLER: Well, thanks a lot! Now, I'm too scared to go to sleep!

CLAY: (Nervously watching BLEDSOE.) Just lock your doors and thanks for calling "Night Rap" on WRAP. Time's up, folks but I don't want to go off the air without thanking Dr. Bledsoe. And I want to say a special goodnight to my Diane wherever you are, you're in my heart.

(LIGHTS fade on the studio.)
