DEDICATION

To my students, who inspire me always.

STORY OF THE PLAY

Headstrong Rosario, leader of a feisty gang of child thieves, has a secret; the young man everyone knows as Rosario is really a teenage girl, climbing the ranks of a clandestine criminal guild. To join the illustrious Council of Convicts, she needs all the help she can get from her friends to steal the Madonna statue off the newest church in the city. But not everyone is thrilled about her risky plan, and Rosario suffers a double betrayal that threatens to destroy her plans and tear the gang apart. Tackling themes of sexism, loyalty, and deceit, Honor Among Thieves is the story of one girl's dangerous ambition. Approximately 70 minutes.

TIME AND PLACE

The play takes place in an alternate historical reality. Sénera could easily be mistaken for a Spanish city at the turn of the 19th century.

PRODUCTION NOTES

Honor Among Thieves is well suited to a unit set design motif. An open city street set can accommodate a variety of locations. An upstage center door can act as the entrance to the hideout. Partitioned sections can act as the hideout and Rosario's room, with other set elements brought in for Glitch's stall and the Council of Convicts, as needed.

The image of the Madonna on top of the Chapel should be present and lit throughout the play. Two actors should be able to "scale" the chapel. Ladders or stairs behind the set piece work well.

Scene 5 offers several design opportunities (projections, shadow box puppetry, etc.) especially to productions with large casts. Directors may wish to utilize actors who are currently not on stage (or students with a technical theatre interest) to artistically represent Bastián's story to the audience.

ACT I
Scene 1

(AT RISE: Early morning in a city called Sénera. LIGHTS up on the interior of an abandoned building with scaffolding along the back of the stage. Pots and pans, crates, draped fabrics of many colors help to style this as a home. KATIA and MARY, SKEET and SLATE, BASTIÁN sleep in piles. MIDGE enters banging pots and pans together.)

MIDGE: (Banging pots and pans.) Good morning! Look at you all! I've been up since four bells!

KATIA: No you haven't, Midge, you liar.

MIDGE: Wouldn't have to lie if you would just wake up!

MARY: Hey, it was supposed to be my turn to do morning pans!

(MIDGE moves to SKEET and SLATE, waking them by shaking and banging the pans.)

SKEET: Why would you want to?

SLATE: (Shaking off MIDGE.) Get off me!

(PENELOPE enters and begins to make breakfast.)

PENELOPE: Where's Rosario?

SKEET: Brooding.

SLATE: Fixing his hair.

SKEET: Brooding while fixing his hair.

KATIA: Don't let him hear you say that.

SLATE: Doesn't matter; we're his favorite thieves anyway.

PENELOPE: Oh, is that why he's put you on trade and sales for the last two weeks?

SKEET: Yeah, well. Your eggs are burning.

MARY: Bastián, tell Midge I get to do pans tomorrow!

SLATE: Why do we still do this?

BASTIÁN: Midge, Mary gets to wake up the gang tomorrow, it's her turn.

PENELOPE: (To SLATE.) It's tradition.

SLATE: It's sadism.

KATIA: Didn't she just say that?

(ROSARIO enters.)

ROSARIO: Ave Maria, you lot are loud.

KATIA: The beast wakes!

ROSARIO: Penelope, you wouldn't happen to be making tostadas, would you?

PENELOPE: What's it to you?

ROSARIO: Only my ability to function.

PENELOPE: Sounds like a "please, Penelope."

KATIA: Probably the closest you're going to get to one.

ROSARIO: No need to say it when you already know I mean it.

PENELOPE: He's really so charming.

ROSARIO: I try my best. Now where's my favorite thieves-in-training?

MARY and MIDGE: Here!

MIDGE: Did you bring us something from the theft last night?

ROSARIO: Now what kind of leader would I be if I didn't?

(ROSARIO pulls out two oranges and hands them to MARY and MIDGE.)

MIDGE: Thank you, Rosario! You're the best.

(MIDGE hugs ROSARIO and runs off.)

MARY: Wow! These are really expensive.

PENELOPE: When you buy them, they are. Rosario, can I talk to you for a minute?

BASTIÁN: Good morning boss.

ROSARIO: Actually—

PENELOPE: Later, then?

ROSARIO: (To PENELOPE.) Uh, definitely. (To BASTIÁN.) You're chipper today.

BASTIÁN: Me conoces, nothing like a full day of thieving and dealing in black market objects to brighten the spirits.
